DYE SUBLIMATION

Sublimation Department

Sublimation shirt printing is a specific process of printing that first involves printing onto a special sheet of paper, then transferring that image onto another material (usually polyester or a polyester mix). The ink is then heated until it disintegrates into the fabric.

OUR SERVICES

DS PRINT

DTF & HEATPRESS

How the Process Works

1. Design is created digitally (Photoshop, Illustrator, etc.)
2. Printed onto PET film using DTF printer (with CMYK + white ink)
3. Adhesive powder is applied to the wet ink
4. Film is cured (heated to melt powder)
5. Design is transferred to shirt using heat press

DTF (Direct-to-Film) printing is a method where designs are printed onto a film and then transferred onto fabric.

A HEATPRESS is used to apply heat and pressure, helping the design stick permanently to the material.

Together, they provide an easy and effective way to create high-quality custom prints on clothing.

SC PRINT

SCREEN PRINTING

Screen printing is a method where ink is pushed through a stencil (screen) onto fabric to create a design.

Each color in a design requires a separate screen.

How the Process Works

Step-by-step:

1. Design Separation

- Artwork is split into individual colors

2. Screen Preparation

- A mesh screen is coated with light-sensitive emulsion

3. Exposure

- Design is exposed using UV light → hardens emulsion except design area

4. Washout

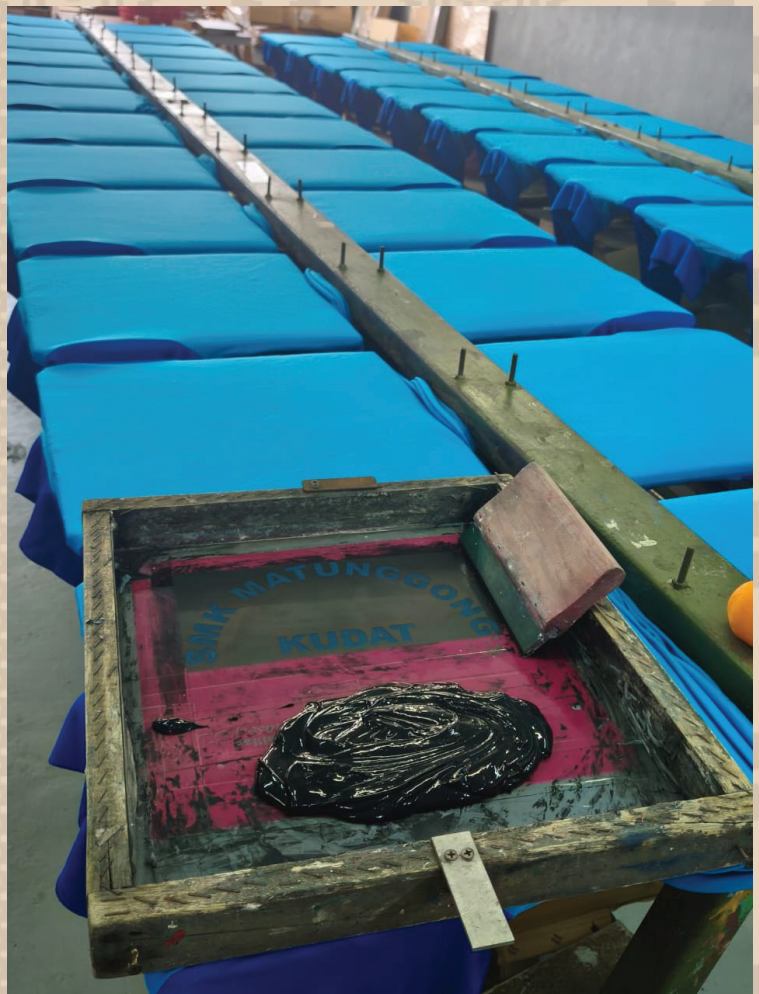

- Unexposed areas are washed away → creates stencil

5. Printing

- Ink is placed on screen
- Squeegee pushes ink through mesh onto T-shirt

6. Curing

- Printed shirt is heated (usually 160–180°C) to cure ink permanently

EMB

EMBROIDERY

Embroidery is the process of using needle and thread to stitch a design directly onto garments like T-shirts, polo shirts, uniforms, and caps.

Instead of printing ink, you are literally sewing the design into the fabric.

How the Process Works

Step-by-step:

1. Design Digitizing

- Artwork is converted into stitch format using software.
- This step defines stitch type, direction, density

2. Machine Setup

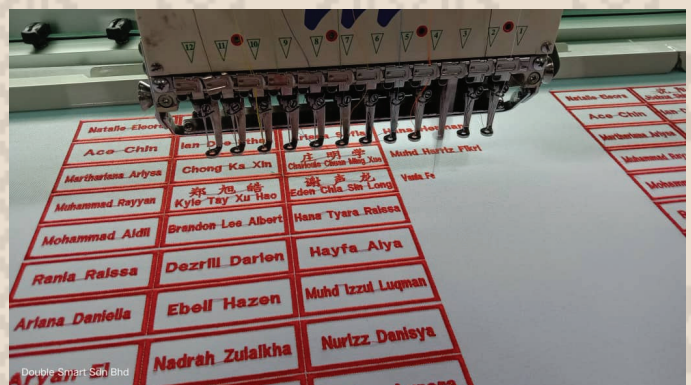

- Thread colors loaded into embroidery machine
- Fabric is placed in a hoop (tight frame)

3. Stitching

- Machine follows digitized file and stitches automatically

4. Finishing

- Excess threads trimmed
- Backing removed or cleaned
